Fund Manager Commentary

This month, the US Dollar corporate bond from DELL was sold in order to increase the position in the ten-year US Treasury bond. The floating rate security from EDF was tendered for repurchase by its issuer. In December, global equity markets continued to strive, carried by the softening of relations between the US and China. In Europe the Stoxx Europe 600 gained +2.1%, while in the US, the S&P500 had one more month of exceptional performance and increased by +2.9%. Emerging markets stocks surprised as it caught up after a very weak month of November. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index had an incredible month and gained +7.2%. Safer fixed income investments continued to suffer from the surrounding "risk on" environment, while riskier bonds performed well. The German bund 10 years lost an impressive -1.7%, its yield increasing to -0.19% (from -0.36% end of last month). Investment grade corporate bonds in euro remained flat with -0.1%. European high yield bonds gained however +1%. Subordinated financials and corporate hybrid bonds gained +0.5% and +0.9% respectively. The 10-year US Treasury bond fell by -1.1%, its yield increasing to 1.92%. US corporate bonds increased by +0.3%, while US high yield bonds gained +2%. The USD lost however a full -1.9% against the EUR and finished the month at 1.123.

Additional information on possible risks in case of unusual market conditions

Counterparty risk : The Sub-Fund could lose money if an entity with which it does business becomes unwilling or unable to honour its commitments to the Sub-Fund.

Default risk : A bond may lose part or its entire value if the issuer is unable to pay interest or repay principal on schedule.

Derivatives risk : Certain derivatives could increase Sub-Fund volatility or expose the Sub-Fund to losses greater than the cost of the derivative.

Liquidity risk : Certain securities could become hard to sell at a desired time and price.

Management risk : Portfolio management techniques that have worked well in normal market conditions could prove ineffective or detrimental during unusual conditions.

Operational risk : In any market, but especially in emerging markets, the fund could lose some or all of its money through a failure in asset safekeeping or through fraud, corruption, political actions or any other unexpected events.
